arts in basic curriculum ABC PROJECT

The Elements:

The primary colors: red, blue and yellow illustrate the belief that education in and through the arts is a primary part of the development of every child.

The basic shapes: square, circle and triangle illustrate that the arts use a variety of “building materials” – performance and production skills - to create and communicate through the arts.

The Design:

The circle is the “educational pie” and the arts are an important part or “slice” of that pie.

The circle also represents the school with the triangle representing the arts as a vital part of the school. Note that the triangle ( the arts ) also extends in to the red square which represents the community to unit and connect community and school through the arts.

Finally the circle represents the child, the triangle the arts as they are both an essential and critical in the life and development of every child in South Carolina by placing both in the center of the red square representative of community and the state.
